MEMORANDUM

TO: NAIOP
FROM: GrayRobinson
DATE: September 22, 2019
SUBJECT: 2020 Legislative Session – Committee Week 1 (September 16-19)

In Tallahassee last week, the 2020 Legislative Session got off to an official start with the first committee week. The September interim committee week functioned primarily for the purpose of setting future meeting agendas, and perhaps the most notable highlight of last week’s events was recognition of state Representative Chris Sprowls as Speaker-Designate.

The Palm Harbor Republican is in line to preside over the House chamber for the 2021 and 2022 Legislative Sessions. A speech delivered last week to his colleagues indicated some of what Sprowls has planned for his leadership role. His remarks generally expressed a need to reduce legislative spending, facilitate transparency in how state dollars are spent at the local level, encourage school choice, and continue efforts to protect Florida’s environment. Sprowls left few stones unturned in his speech. While he did not dive deeply into health care issues or criminal justice concerns, he encouraged members to not “read into that oversight.” What Sprowls did address, however, is indicative of the general direction he believes the Legislature — or at least the House — should pursue.

The Speaker-Designate discussed how the state “budget is growing faster than our reserves.” He added, “We need to increase our reserves and create a new fund for disaster recovery. There is no excuse not to be prepared for the next storm or the next recession.” Sprowls also described an initiative he thinks could curb misuse of tax dollars. “We need an Inspector General with the power to investigate these organizations, recover misspent funds, impose civil fines, and, in extreme cases, refer matters to our State Attorneys for criminal prosecution,” he said.

And following a record-breaking year in environmental spending, Sprowls suggested the environment will remain among his top priorities. “We don’t live in Iowa,” Sprowls said. “We live on a peninsula. We cannot afford to put our head in the sand and hope the beach doesn’t disappear under a permanent rising tide.”
These early signs of what Sprowls values could become manifest in this year’s Session, which formally begins January 14. And for those looking more than a few months down the line, the remarks help predict what’s to come from Tallahassee in 2021 and beyond.

Activities and Bills related to NAIOP – Summary List

Annual Summit Review – Last week, representatives from all five of NAIOP’s chapters in the Florida -- South Florida, Northwest Florida, Northeast Florida, Central Florida and Tampa Bay -- participated in a state summit to discuss legislative priorities for the coming year. The meeting highlighted NAIOP’s influence in Florida, and it drew two leading members of the state legislature to Orlando to speak.

Attendees heard presentations by State Senator David Simmons, Pro Tempore of the upper house, and House Representative Mike La Rosa, Chairman of the Commerce Committee. NAIOP members also discussed in-depth the issues they will prioritize in 2020. These include:

- Enacting the FAST Act;
- Phasing out the Business Rent Tax;
- Removing the Witness Requirement for Commercial Leases;
- Maintaining a Commercial Building Representative on Florida Building Commission;
- Improving the State Fire Code; and
- Reining in Excessive Linkage Fees

Business Rent Tax – The Senate and House have both filed bills to enforce the internet sales tax (bills summarized below). It is early, but both chambers are fully expected to propose a further reduction in the business rent tax.

FAST Act – The GR lobbying team met with both Senator Perry and Representative Plakon to seek their sponsorship of the legislation for the 2020 session. The bill is presently in drafting and once released, we expect both to file this legislation again.

Lease Signatory Changes – Legislation to eliminate the witness requirement for commercial leases in currently in drafting. We are working with both the House and Senate to secure sponsors.

Florida Building Commission – No legislation has been filed yet that addresses the Florida Building Commission. We are working with DBPR Secretary Halsey Beshears to preserve the CRE representative on the commission and ensure that NAIOP is better represented.

Summary of Committee Week One (September 16-19)

On Budgeting

The House Appropriations Committee — and the state coffers as a whole — were met last week with some less-than-ideal news from the Legislature’s Office of Economic and Demographic Research chief Amy Baker. Baker informed lawmakers that the long-range economic outlook currently projects $867 million fewer in revenue collections than previously forecasted. That’s significantly less money than the members had previously planned to have for spending over the next two years.

Taking Baker’s presentation and Sprowls’ urging to increase reserves spending, lawmakers could be looking at a tight budget year. Adding credence to this idea are remarks from House Appropriations Chair Travis Cummings to reporters afterward. Cummings, who told the media that hurricane resiliency and preparation is top of mind, suggested “it probably would be a good idea … to try to increase reserves or try to allocate some dollars and have a [hurricane] plan moving forward,” meaning that less money could potentially be available for funding other parts of the budget.

Issue Roundup

Well ahead of bill-filing deadlines, lawmakers already are looking at legislation and hearing from agencies on how they think Florida can improve its government services.

CRC targeted: After failing to catch traction last year, Florida senators are again pushing a proposal to abolish the Constitution Revision Commission (CRC), an appointed body of members that meets every 20 years to vet and put forward to voters constitutional changes. Critics of the CRC have, among other things, taken umbrage with its practice of “bundling,” or looping together seemingly unrelated provisions into individual ballot items. Meanwhile, proponents of the CRC practice have argued it’s necessary to prevent ballot fatigue and to minimize ballot length. The Senate Judiciary Committee unanimously approved the proposal (SJR 142) last week.

Public Safety: Widely covered by news media this past week, lawmakers received lengthy testimony from experts from across the state on mass violence. The Legislature has publicly noted that it will pursue actions this year that would help prevent shootings and other forms of large-scale violence. More extensive gun background checks could be on the table this year, according to state Sen. Tom Lee, who chaired the meeting.

Under the Radar: Lawmakers and stakeholders are taking action toward some of the niche issues they’d like to see tackled this Session. One bill (SB 276), for example, would require cancer-awareness instruction in high schools to educate students on the dangers of prostate and breast cancer. A group of lawmakers this week also held a press conference to express the need to financially aid the storm-battered Bahamas. Meanwhile, in the criminal justice sphere, Department of Corrections Secretary Mark Inch informed lawmakers that he’d be asking for an additional $89 million in his legislative budget request to help cover the cost of potentially scaling back the length of prison guard shifts.
